A New You!

Can you change who you are? Can a farmer become a web designer? Can a surfer become a businessman? That's what we are going to see in the new BBC programme Faking It.

In the first series of the programme, we follow the transformation of Sian Evans from a student of classical music to club DJ. Sian comes from a small village in the countryside. She is a quiet, talented girl, who doesn't like house music, never goes to dance clubs and she doesn't stay up all night like many girls her age.

But Sian likes challenge and her lifestyle is about to change completely. First, she moves to London. Here she is living with two professional DJs, Lottie and Ann. They have the job of transforming Sian into a club DJ. They are teaching her the art of mixing records. From the start, Sian hates the music and finds mixing the records very hard. But she wants to be a success, so she is doing her best.

Sian is under pressure. She knows that she has to mix the records like a professional and she has to look right. Normally she wears smart clothes, but a fashion designer is helping her to choose the right style. Now Sian is beginning to look like a DJ.

After four weeks of practising Sian now has to work on her own for the first time and play to an audience. Things aren't going right, because when she starts performing, everybody leaves. The evening ends in crying. Sian has to take more lessons before she plays to a jury of professional DJs. Can this shy girl who hates dance music convince the professionals that she is real? Let's wait a week and see!

- 1) The new BBC programme helps people change their lifestyle.
- 2) Sian studies classical music.
- 3) During the programme Sian is living in a small village in the countryside.
- 4) Normally Sian lives with her parents.
- 5) Sian doesn't like the music she has to play.
- 6) Sian likes her new style in clothes.
- 7) Mixing records is not very difficult for Sian.
- 8) Her first performance is very good.

Correct the false statements.
